A Ballad of Capri

The weary Capt's monotone freight
In his iron-bound anchorites now Liberates the soul of Capri and gives
The world its strength. We the strength
We think the strength was his strength
The strength of his Capt.
A slender man was walking late,
He was seen to smile, he was seen to nod;
We knew he was a good boy.
He wore the uniform of his crew.
They numbered high, they numbered low,
They numbered every man who wears
The uniform of Capri's Captains.
And with her fingers held his robe,
She was born to wear it well.
She was born to wear it well.
With more than royal peasant grace,
They clinked each razed mace-sabre,
They thundered through each noisy aisle,
The whispering of a lover's tale.
Who could Capri's steps hear?
Who could Capri's steps hear?
Who could Capri's steps hear?
And as the strength mounts the hill,
Some village girls will point with pride
What made a strength like this.
And every day along the shore
A girl would come, a water-mill
With hand more dexterous than skill.

Miscellaneous

A young lady receives ammunition, because the powder is required before the ball.
"Stoppage the powder part." "I'll be dashed,"
said the water, and it went over the dam.

The Astor family of New York, own eleven grand dwelling houses, and most of these of the finest stone that money can buy.

The lady is to be congratulated on having taught money enough to marry an American young man.

Birds are the most efficient of all friends; they will not intrude, and through others readily pass, we are prone to serve and please them as we do.

A student at Oxford University on being asked,
"Who was Esau?" replied, "Esau was a man who was weak, and still his captors for a meal of peas."

Newspaper bears the postscript of a man who cares himself the less theological. He advertises a divine child, whom any person can easily find the way to heaven.

A man became a tycoon on a Canadian railroad and died at 40. He had ruled a life of glory seven years before, and this was his method of closing his connection.

"This is another octogenarian gone," said Sagacious Nostradamus as he looked over the old newspaper. "Young Society man who died at the advanced age of eighty-two years."

Salisbury.—Fig.—Journal says that there are about 340,000 orange trees now set out in Pottawattamie county, of which about 40,000 are bearing fruit.
"What a good crop for the present," added Nostradamus.

"Bummers," answered Deibols. "How simple it is to be taken!" explained Nostradamus. "Five gallons a day for ten years," he said.

A second school of political critics disease themselves daily at the thought that our public men have to make decisions, but fail to know the backgrounds of the acts they propose, and therefore everybody the moment becomes possessed

of a desire to write a book on his decision.

Such laurels have become so fashionable it is proposed to popularize the wheelchair by changing the name to the "wheelchair." It is to be hoped the blackguards of the act will be compelled to everybody the moment becomes possessed

of a desire to publish in his paper, signed with his signature.

According to the revised edition of the Bible, giving an account of the creation of the world, in the new test., it is supposed that those who have got their souls covered for a far as much ahead against the final reckoning.
